

D.S. Kim

Artistic expression was not necessarily innate to Kim. Throughout his childhood, he showed interest and an inclination towards the more rigidly structured fields of science. Kim concentrated on microbial biology during his undergraduate career and later pursued a medical degree to further advance his studies. After nearly thirty years working primarily in the field of research with a stint professorship, Kim began to show interest in the arts. He enjoyed the relaxing and therapeutic qualities of painting, though continued to regard it as a delicate procedure. He was diligent in applying his methodical approach to the medium. Kim found a sense of serenity in the creative process and soon retired from his professional career to devote all his time to painting. Now taking daily strolls on his country property in Ohio, Kim uses his quick plein air sketches to compose more calculated landscapes in his in-home studio.
