

Darryl Pottorf

Darryl Pottorf has been creating complex, inspiring works for more than 30 years, continuously pushing the boundaries of his medium and subject matter. He has traveled extensively, and his work reflects his love of classical and architectural forms. He uses the photographs he takes in a provocative manner to add content and humor to his work.

Pottorf's mediums include UV-coated watercolor on polylamine, black and silver toner on lexan, and acrylic on aluminum. With each of these mediums he employs the photo transfer process that he began using in the late eighties, first in black and white and then in color, which has come to characterize his more recent output. His pieces have been described as lyrical, robust, beautifully composed, bold, perceptive and very satisfying.

Pottorf has collaborated with Robert Rauschenberg on a series of outstanding exhibitions. Like Rauschenberg, his early career included work in the theater. In addition, he is a practicing architect. He has designed Robert Rauschenberg's home and studio as well as his own, and continues to design both residential and commercial spaces.
