

Deborah Schenck

Deborah Schenck grew up surrounded by English country gardens, winding lanes and meadows. She spent her summers on the beach in Cornwall and the moors in Devon.

With a degree in photography, art and design, she has traveled extensively and won various photography awards. Whilst visiting places like India and China, she discovered her true passion for simple images in nature and the beauty of colour.

She now lives in Vermont with her family, in a village similar to where she was raised. Her Polaroid transfers of flowers and still life reveal a sense of romanticism and nostalgia in a contemporary format.
