

Anna Pugh

The painter Anna Pugh, born 1938, is admired as a colorist and storyteller. In twenty years she has produced over two hundred paintings, all in private collections in Great Britain, Europe and North America.

Her paintings, like those of Richard Dadd and Howard Hodgkins, show the commonplace enlivened by touches of the surreal. Few artists equal her ability to record natural phenomena and to invigorate it with such persuasive illusion. They have the freshness and irreverent vitality of life lived close to nature. They are pictures that people enjoy living with, recording the countryside; the flora and fauna and the changing seasons.
