

Darrell Bush

Darrell Bush was born in East Moline, Illinois. Hunting and fishing with his family occupied much of his free time as a teenager and gave him a love of the outdoors. His first paintings, completed as a teenager, were landscapes and nature scenes.

Bush has a degree in commercial art from Northern Illinois University. He moved to Minnesota to work as a commercial illustrator and after awhile decided to focus on a full time art career.

U.S. Art magazine s 1996, 1997 and 1998 surveys of retail galleries declared Bush as one of the top 25 most popular print artists in America.

He has been juried into several fine art shows where he has received numerous Best of Show awards and was chosen as the Artist of the Year for the 1997 Wildlife, Western and Americana Art Exhibit.

Other honors include: the 1996 National Fish and Wildlife Stamp and Print, the 1989 Minnesota Pheasant Habitat Stamp Print, and the 1987 Idaho First of State Upland Game Permit.

The competitive wildlife art market in Minnesota allowed Bush to refine his trade, and after ten years, the artist, his wife and their two children moved back to their hometown in Illinois.
