Fred Stone

1996 marks Fred Stone's twentieth year painting thoroughbred racing. During this time he has released and sold more than sixty thousand of his limited edition prints. The Los Angeles Times and the Chicago Tribune have called Fred Stone the most famous painter of horses in the world. His work is in the homes of some of the worlds most notable people including Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II and in the office of President George W. Bush in the White House. He has been featured on ESPN and ABC, NBC and CBS television. Any print personally signed by Fred Stone can go up in value as high as thousands of dollars. More people own a Fred Stone print than that of any other horse artist in the history, making him the most sought after equine artist in the world.

Through his limited edition prints and posters, Fred Stone has raised many thousands of dollars for racing charities like the DonMacBeth Memorial Jockey Fund, the Shoemaker Foundation, and Canadas Avelino Gomez Fund, as well as for therapeutic riding programs and other charitable organizations throughout the country.
